

5 Must See Sights in New York

New York, New York. A city so good they named it twice. Whether you're planning a long break or a short city-hopping trip New York is the perfect destination. Visitors flock to the city all year round due to the wealth of experiences and treats available. For many it feels like coming home, we already know the iconic buildings and streets from movies and TV shows set in the city.

In fact New York is so charismatic often it feels like another character in many productions.

If you are pressed for time the array of options can be baffling. Analysis paralysis can set in and you end up making no decision. Our must see guide will ensure you make the best of any visit. If you are only visiting why not choose one of the many boutique hotels in New York as a base, this will save precious time and place you near the major sights.

Walking across the Brooklyn Bridge really helps set the tone of your visit. You can take in the scenery away from the high-rise building and get a little perspective of the marvelous architecture. Of course you will also get some fabulous backgrounds for your holiday snaps. The Brooklyn Bridge is easily accessible by the subway network or you could travel by another typical New York method, the yellow-checkered cab.

Another free activity that takes in iconic sights is a visit to Central or Prospect Park.

See native New Yorkers making full use of the facilities and see how many filming locations you can spot. The parks change throughout the season, in particular an autumn visit is very rewarding as it allows you to view the rich colors displayed by the changing leaves.

In the evening New York really comes alive. You shouldn't pass up on the opportunity to catch a show on Broadway. Many long running shows have tickets available on the day and discount vendors can get you a great price, if you are content to wait until the last minute. Shows off Broadway will allow you to catch the next big thing and give more left field productions a chance to prove themselves. Alternatively if your tastes are more refined why not take the chance to enjoy a concert at the world famous Carnegie Hall.

Finally why not take a walk through one of New Yorks' distinct neighborhoods. There are neighborhoods to suit everyone.

Greenwich village has a great selection of bookstores, bohemian coffee shops and wonderful architecture. Williamsburg is the epicenter of hipsters. Unusual people and unusual niche shops combine to offer you something that your fashionable friends will no doubt be envious of. Those looking for a little pampering should hit the Upper East Side. The selection of spas and salons will provide great relaxation after some serious shopping in the many boutiques.

Whatever your peccadillos New York will cast its spell over you and you'll find its charm irresistible. Like the city named twice it's unlikely that you'll be able to resist visiting just the once.
